

The Caltech Women's Club presents

Sarah Yeomans

Professor at West Virginia University & Director of Educational Programs, Biblical Archaeology Society

Medicine in Antiquity: What We Have Learned from Archaeology

Tuesday, February 21st 11:30 am – 1:30 pm

The Athenaeum, Hall of Associates

Talk to be followed by lunch

Professor Yeomans has appeared as an interviewed expert on the History Channel's "Cities of the Underworld" series, has served as a consultant and host for the Discovery Channel's "Ancient Enemies" series and is a contributing writer at Archaeology Magazine as well as the Biblical Archaeology Review. She has lectured widely on a variety of topics pertaining to Roman and Biblical archaeology, the revival of antiquity in the Renaissance and ancient medicine in the Mediterranean world. Recently Professor Yeomans was awarded the Mayers Fellowship from the Huntington Library and Museum for her research in ancient medical science and technology.

Her current research involves the archaeological research of Biblical sites in the Near East as well as ancient medical technology and astronomy.
